

AMERICAN GANGS

February 7-9, 2012
R.O.C.I.C. Training Center

Presented in conjunction with the International Narcotics Interdiction Association (INIA)

Course Overview

This three-day course will provide students with basic knowledge, history, dynamics and sociology of street-level criminal street gangs. Topics will include why gangs form, what drives their activities and violence, legal issues surrounding their documentation, safety techniques officers might employ in dealing with gang members, opening lines of communication with the gang member and an overview of current trends. The course will also include training on report writing, vertical prosecution, court preparation, victim/witness handling and expert testimony.

About the Presenter

Detective Felix Aguirre (“The Gang Guy”) has 27 years of law enforcement experience, most of which was spent working criminal street gangs. He has documented several street-level gangs and their membership from the beginning or when they first came to the attention of law enforcement, and has monitored social groups and watched as they evolved into legally recognized criminal street gangs. For over 23 years, Detective Aguirre has conducted training for law enforcement across the United States and Mexico, including the San Diego Sheriff and Police Departments, El Paso Sheriff and Police Department, Honolulu Police Department, Tijuana and Mexicali Police, and numerous probation and parole officers. He has presented at many Gang Investigators’ conferences and has lectured on street gangs and numerous major universities in California and Texas. Detective Aguirre has testified as an expert on criminal street gangs on countless occasions in San Diego Superior and Municipal Courts as well as the San Diego County Grand Jury.
