INIA HISTORY

The International Narcotics Interdiction Association traces its roots to 1991, when the Los Angeles International Airport Narcotics Task Force organized the first Skynarc Airport Interdiction Training Conference. As participation grew, the conference expanded nationwide and began attracting international law enforcement partners. In 1997, INIA formally incorporated as a nonprofit educational association dedicated to advancing criminal interdiction training and professional development. Today, INIA hosts one of the largest interdiction conferences in the world, drawing more than 700 attendees annually and supporting law enforcement professionals from more than 30 countries.
